Premier Baldwin To Make Statement Upon Reparations Thursday

nouncement Eases British Public Opinion Which Has Been Manifesting Increased Impatience and Con-cern Over Failure of Government to Commit Itself to Definite Policy

LONDON, July 9.—Prime Minister Baldwin's announcement in the house of commons this afternoon that it might be possible for the government on make a statement on reparations Thursday, and the properties of the properties of the properties of the statement of reparations Thursday. But the properties are statement of the cabinet to commit the statement of the cabinet to commit to a definite policy. It is anticipated that the premier's statement will furnish parliament and the public with a clear-cut, comprehensive analysis of the whole subject. This may afford the opposition groups in the house opportunity for open debate, and it is considered likely hat before the week is out the Ruhr controversy will have entered new and broader phase.
